

Update to AIM Advanced Imaging of the Heart Clinical Appropriateness Guideline*

Published: Apr 1, 2019 - Policy Updates / Medical Policy & Clinical Guidelines

Effective for dates of service on and after June 29, 2019, the following updates will apply to the AIM Clinical Appropriateness Guidelines for Advanced Imaging of the Heart and AIM Clinical Appropriateness Guidelines for Arterial Ultrasound.

Advanced Imaging of the Heart

- Resting Transthoracic Echocardiography (TTE)
 - o Changes made to address frequency of surveillance of LV function for cardio-oncology.

- TTE
 - o Changes made to address frequency of surveillance echocardiography following transcatheter mitral valve repair. These recommendations follow CMS guidelines.

Arterial ultrasound

- Upper extremity arterial duplex
 - o Indication added for creation of arteriovenous (AV) fistulae for dialysis

- Lower extremity arterial duplex
 - o ACC guideline for management of peripheral arterial disease (2016) indicates that Duplex imaging should be performed only after the decision to revascularize has been made. There is no role for duplex imaging in the initial diagnosis of peripheral arterial disease. The current AIM guideline is not aligned with this position and the proposed changes address that malalignment.

- o Language changed to account for the fact that critical limb ischemia should include patients with non-healing ulcers and gangrene
